

Koji

Design: Giuseppe Viganò

Description

The Koji sofa embodies the essence of modern luxury furniture design, where refined craftsmanship, comfort, and aesthetic harmony converge. Defined by its soft yet architectural volumes, Koji allows endless configurations, offering versatile compositions that adapt to any contemporary living room with effortless elegance. Each module is enhanced by a distinctive solid Canaletta walnut or ash decorative etail, a hallmark of Porada's Italian woodworking mastery, transforming a functional element into a sophisticated design feature.

The internal structure is crafted from a one-piece shell in multilayer and solid poplar and fir wood, combined with a system of elastic straps—3"1/2 wide and positioned parallel to the seat direction—to ensure superior elasticity, stability, and long-lasting comfort. The padding, made of polyurethane foam with differentiated densities, guarantees both structure and softness: firmer at the base for support and layered with low-bearing, highly breathable foam for a plush, inviting feel. It is wrapped in thermobonded polyester fibre paired with a white, hypoallergenic cotton liner that ensures breathability and durability. The adjustable recessed feet create a distinctive floating effect, adding lightness to the design and allowing subtle height adjustment.

For enhanced relaxation, optional back cushions filled with 100% channelled goose down (Oro label, Assopiuma certified) provide an extra level of luxury and comfort. Made in Italy.
