

Sedona Bed

Design: Patricia Urquiola

Description

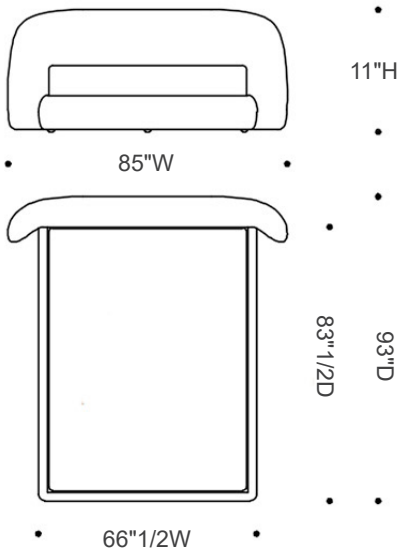

Drawing inspiration from the desert sandstone canyons and organic landscapes of Sedona, Arizona, the Sedona bed reinterprets nighttime well-being through fluid, comforting geometry. Sculpted with soft lines and zero sharp edges, its enveloping silhouette echoes natural landforms carved by wind and water, establishing a calm, technology-free sanctuary focused on rest, reading, and meditation.

Engineered for exceptional lightness and structural durability, the load-bearing frame utilizes Polimex, an advanced composite material composed mainly of expanded polystyrene and structural polyurethanes. Certified to Class 1-IM standards, this material significantly reduces overall weight and foam consumption compared to traditional systems without compromising structural strength. The sweeping headboard and frame feature molded soft polyurethane foam with an internal structural steel insert, reinforced by plywood panels, black-painted steel corner supports, height-adjustable mattress base brackets, and durable polypropylene feet.
